

Patrícia Canelas

Director and Lecturer for the MSc in Sustainable Urban Development at the University of Oxford and fellow at Kellogg College. Research and teaching seek to advance knowledge on the dynamic relationship between the public, private and civic sectors involved in the governance of value creation (or destruction) and capture through the built environment. This includes exploring how the different sectors share responsibilities, how and why roles and responsibilities shift, the fundamental values of each sector, their knowledge sources, and the relative power of each side. Interested in speaking across the disciplines of urban planning, urban design, architecture and real estate, to discuss the fundamental values of the public, private and civic sectors, and how the different sectors conceptualize and engage with sustainable urban development.